WILL be opened on Monday the 22d. instant at that large commodious room formerly occupied by Mr. Leo in Norris's Alley, No. 15, nearly opposite the City Tavern; under the direction of Messrs. Smith and Chandler both of liberal education, and long experienced in their respective professions—as they intend under the patronage of a discerning public, permanently to establish themselves in this undertaking, their whole study and attention will be devoted to the improvement of their pupils.—These will be conducted upon the latest and most approved plans, through a complete course of academical studies, or those parts only that may be pointed out, as more immediately adapted to their particular views in life—Certain portions of their time will be assigned for geography, history, extracts, composition, and declamations in French and English, in order to form early habits of writing and speaking with propriety—Visits from parents and literary characters, tending to excite a spirit of emulation, will be gratefully received. The hours of study are from 9 to 12 A.M. and from 2 to 5 P. M

They offer to translate the English, French, Spanish and Portuguese languages; and to draw in their proper modes and stile, all kinds of writing, whether legal, commercial, or epistolary.

The first Monday in November, they also propose to open an evening school for French, bookkeeping, surveying and navigation, of which they have a practical as well as theoretical knowledge. As a number of French gentlemen will attend, the students of their language, by continually conversing with them, as well as their teachers, will acquire, along with the principles, a facility of expression.

FROM A LATE ENGLISH PAPER.

OF RASTADT.

RASTADT so famous for its former, as well as its pending treaty, is in the Margravate of Baden, whose sovereign has ruled over it above half a century, and is ranked amongst the most enlightened men of Europe. The strongest proof of the excellence of his head and heart is the love of his subjects, who revere him as the father of their country.

Though their territory touches upon the Focus of revolution, they never have warped from their allegiance. But on the contrary every man took up arms and rallied round their sovereign, and laid their fortunes at the foot of his throne, offering him in advance any number of years, taxes he chose to demand. But the generous prince was touched at this act: he gloriously refused the offer by saying, that he was determined to stand or fall with his people, and therefore his fortune was theirs, his life was theirs, and he placed himself at their head, and sent the hereditary princess and his grand children out of the country.

The hereditary prince of Baden is married to a sister of the dowager queen of Prussia, and is aunt to the king; the princess had another married to the present emperor of Russia, but who died. She has one daughter married to the heir apparent of the Russian empire, and her who is queen of Sweden, and a third who is duchess of Deux-Ponts, and whose consort is heir to the two electorates of Bavaria and the Palatinate.

Such love from the subjects, and such illustrious alliances are proofs of the moral respectability of that house. But as strong proofs of the moral and political veneration in which it is held are, that though the French revolutionists had but to cross the Rhine, and ravage the country, and though they often passed over it and possessed it, yet they always respected in it the virtues of the house of Baden. The horrors of war filled the trenches of Khel with the Austrians. But the Margrave's subjects were not wantonly or unnecessarily made the victims of cruelty in any case, as far as was generally possible in a state of war.

Carlsruhe, which is the residence of the court of Baden, is singular for its plan. Its form resembles that of an open fan: the junction of the sticks being the situation of the palace, whence all the streets dart out in radii, and are intersected by semi circular ones; so that from the palace you can command a view of all the streets at once; as from the centre of a semi circle you look along its different radii, and its circumference. And behind the palace there are avenues cut through a forest to correspond.

The space before the palace is bounded by a long semi circular piazza: and the intermediate space of about two or three hundred yards wide, is occupied by the court yard and gardens, filled with orange trees in summer.

There is a beautiful scope of ground behind the palace, laid out in a true English style. And when under an unclouded sky, and surrounded by a solemn stillness, and breathing all the perfumes of the East, I have gazed around me, and then turned inward to reflect upon the virtues of its princely owners, I have frequently exclaimed to myself—This is a Paradise! Heaven guard it against a serpent.

As to the political consequence of the Margrave, I refer you to Clark's Statistical view of Germany.

WEXFORD,

Where the rebels were lately concentrated in such force, is the capital of the country of the same name—a sea-port town, situate at the mouth of the river Slaney, eight miles from the sea, 60 miles south from Dublin, nearly opposite to St. David's in Wales from whence it is distant about 65 miles, lat. 52 deg. 13 min. North; it is nearly three miles in length along the river, population about 7,000—it was formerly fortified—it was taken by Cromwell in the civil wars, and dismantled, after putting the inhabitants to the sword.

Wexford was, as early as the year of 800, a strong post of the Ostmen, or Danes, from whence they made repeated sallies to the annoyance of the interior country. It was first colonized by the English in 1172. It was given by Dermot Mac Murtoch, king of Leinster, along with the two adjoining Baronies of Bargie and Forth, as a marriage portion with his eldest daughter Eva to Richard de Clare, Earl of Pembroke (see Lord Littleton's life of Henry II). The inhabitants of the town of Wexford, and the two Baronies of Bargie and Forth, are a distinct class of people from the native, or old Irish, as they have neither their language, manners, or customs. They speak the language that Chaucer wrote in, and have a strong resemblance in their habits to the Saxons. The county of Wexford is the best cultivated part of Ireland, as the Gentlemen owners of land always reside on their estates, which (especially in the Baronies of Bargie and Forth) never exceed from 300l to 500l. per annum, the whole being divided into small farms, and in the highest state of agriculture. Barley is the principal grain attended to, as the town of Wexford is the principal port that supples the Dublin market with malt, which is the principal export. There are more malt houses in this town than there are in any other in the kingdom.

When Cromwell appeared before the town, it was garrisoned by 500 men, under the command of Colonel Sinnot, who wanted to wait for succour from the Earl of Castlehaven, who was marching with assistance from Kilkenny; but through the treachery of Stafford, the Lieutenant Governor, Cromwell got admittance into the town after meeting with a spirited resistance, and put the garrison and inhabitants to the sword; his summons to Sinnot to surrender the town is preserved (framed and glazed) as a curiosity in the Post-Office of Wexford. The antient names in the town and vicinity, descended from Strongbow and his followers, are the Hervey's, Devereux's, Pendergast's, Cod's, Sisenai's, &c.—the descendants of Cromwell, and his followers are, the Nun's, Grogan's, Waddy's, Boyd's Hughe's, &c. To the Westward, about half a mile from the town, is a chalybeat spring, remarkable for its strength, and much resorted to (by persons afflicted with chronic or other disorders) from all parts of the Kingdom.

Of the King of Prussia.

A Corporal of the King's body-guard, who was remarkably vain, but reckoned a man of great bravery, being unable to purchase a watch, fixed a leaden bullet to a chain, and wore it in his fob. The King one day, having a mind to be merry, addressed him thus:—"Well, Mr. Corporal, you must have been a great œconomist to be able to purchase a watch. By mine it is now six—pray tell me what it is by your's?" The corporal, who guessed the King's intention, immediately drawing the ball from his fob, said, "Sire, my watch neither points to five o'clock, nor to six o'clock, but it every moment informs me that I must die for your Majesty"—"Hold, my friend" replied the King, who was much affected by this speech, "take this watch, that you may know also the hour when you die for me; and immediately he put into his hands his own watch which was richly set with diamonds.

By this Day's Mail.

NEW-YORK, November 13.

To the Editor of the Daily Advertiser.

SIR,

Sometime after my arrival at this port, the following extract was handed me by one of my friends. It is in your paper of the 10th of August last—copied from the Salem Gazette:

"SALEM, August 3.

"Wednesday arrived here the brig Exchange, capt. Richardson, 133 days from Batavia.—On the 12th July, was boarded by the English letter of marque schr. Chance capt. Thomas, 11 days from New-York, bound to Martinique. He sent his boat and took capt. Richardson on board, with all his letters and papers, which he opened and examined, and told capt. R he should carry him into Martinique where he expected he should be able to condemn the cargo, tho' there was no foundation for his expectation. At 9 o'clock in the evening he returned capt. R. on board his own vessel, ordering him to stand to the southward with him, and he would send for him again the next morning. At midnight capt. R. took the liberty to wear ship and stand to the northward, on which the Chance fired three shot at him, but did him no damage. Capt. Thomas, kept several of the letters with him which enclosed bills of exchange, but returned the bills."

After perusing the above it would be difficult to tell, whether astonishment or indignation were uppermost in my mind; astonishment at the effrontery, and indignation at the ingratitude of Captain Richardson. After some reflection, I think proper, in vindication of my conduct, to publish a true statement of the transaction. It is true that I boarded Capt. R. and demanded his papers; but after examining them and his letters I returned both, (with my permission for him to proceed on his voyage) as I was convinced, the vessel and cargo were American property. I treated Capt. R. with that civility which is due from one gentleman to another, he was supplied by me with several articles of which he was in want, and in return for these favours he presented me with a large jar of sweetmeats. With respect to the guns which were fired, they were private signals concerted between a prize I had captured on my voyage, and my own vessel. A few remarks on the very accurate account, Captain R. gives of this transaction, will be sufficient to convince every impartial man of its falsity. He says, I told him I expected to condemn the cargo and ordered him to stand to the Southward, at nine o'clock in the evening. Will any man believe if such had been my expectation, that I would have allowed Capt. R. to go on board his vessel and take command of her during the night, when according to every human probability he would have escaped? No man endowed with common sense will believe it, and no man but Capt. R. would have published so lame an account. With respect to the letters, likewise: as no rational creature acts without some motives for his conduct, what, I would enquire, would have induced me to return them and detain the bills of exchange? or why after such conduct on my part, did Capt. R think proper to make me a present of the sweetmeats as an acknowledgment of my politeness to him? To a person unacquainted with human nature, Captain R.'s conduct would appear incomprehensible, there may however be some reasons assigned for it. His vanity might have been flattered by this account, as it required both dexterity and courage to escape an armed vessel, and his fears of detection might not have been great, as it was improbable that the publication would ever reach the author. But if he would be advised by me, for the future let him be more cautious, as falshood is generally detected and ingratitude sooner or later will be punished.

DAVID THOMAS.

BOSTON, Nov. 7.

The result of the election on Monday, though little pains were taken by the friends to government, demonstrated an increase of federal, and a decrease of jacobin influence in this town:—notwithstanding the frightful tales told about the Stamp Act, the Land Tax, Alien and Sedition Laws, &c. At the election in 1796, Mr Otis had but 1408 votes in Boston, and the Ja-cokin candidate, Mr Bowdion, had 986. This year Mr Otis has increased to 1726; whereas gen Heath could attract but 936!

In congratulating the federalists of the United States, on the re-election of the hon. Harrison G. Otis, to a seat in the national legislature, we discharge a duty which we know will diffuse general joy throughout the continent, amongst the friends to their country's independense and honor;—and strike with chagrin all those, who by low arts, stale tricks and falsities, have endeavored to drive from the American councils every man of talents, integrity, independence and decision. At this moment the retention of such a man as Mr Otis, is of the highest moment.—His political adversary, the Genevan Gallatin, is re-elected, and our country stands in need of abilities like Mr Otis's to ferret him in his retreats, and to strip his designs of metaphysical garb which conceals their turpitude.

In all the states which surround Massachusetts, not one equivocal character has been elected to Congress. It is to be hoped the curse will not alight on the Mother of the American Revolution, of giving political existence to any who would, by their baseness, or indecision, destroy the fair prospect of inheritance, which is allotted her children.

We are assured of the re-election of the Hon. Messrs. Otis, Sewall, and Read.—Further we have not learnt.

In the 1st Western District, the Hon. Theodore Sedgwick, and Thomas Ives, Esquires, are the candidates.

NEWS EXPECTED.

Capt. Drinkwater arrived here on Monday, from Portland, informs that the ship Cumberland, capt Scott, in 22 days from Ireland, had arrived there on Friday last. Capt. D. could gather no particular news; but if the passage has been as brief as reported, we may reasonably expect intelligence of moment.

NEWS FROM EUROPE.

Yesterday capt. Elkins, in the brig Zephyr, arrived here from the Mediterranean.

On the 16th August, capt. Elkins spoke a Greek Polacre, 35 days from Smyrna; from whom he learnt, that Gen. Buonaparte had arrived at Alexandrietta (Scandaroon) and entrenched himself; that the French still continued to hold Malta, where the French garrison consisted of 6000 men; their place in the army being supplied by an equal number of Maltese. Buonaparte took with him from Malta a 64 gun ship, and a frigate.

The engagement between the Lyon British man of war, of 64 guns, and four Spanish frigates of 36 guns each, is confirmed. A person is on board the Zephyr, who was in the Lyon when the battle commenced, who says, that about the 27th July, off Minorca, at 6 o'clock, A M. saw four Spanish frigates, one of whom had carried away her foretopmast. The Lyon bore down upon them, and about 10, a line was formed by the Spanish, with the disabled ship in the center. At half past 10, the Spanish commenced action, which continued very warm for half an hour, when the Spaniards tacked, and left the disabled ship, which soon after struck; and was carried into Naples. The Lyon lost but one man; the Spaniards about 80 killed and wounded.

AUTHENTIC.

A letter from his Excellency Governor Frederici, of Surinam, and its dependencies, to a gentleman in this town, dated Sept. 10, 1798, says:

"I shall redouble my care, to preserve the tranquility and good order of the interior of the colony;—which to this moment, has continued without interruption. You know, that the first and surest mean is to keep up a sufficient supply of articles of the first necessity;—and it is that end, that I shall continue, let what will happen, to admit and protect American vessels, which bring us those articles.—I write thus positively, to remove from your countrymen, in the present circumstances, all fear on this subject; and to assure them they shall be received and protected, as they ever have been."

It appears by letters from France, that the taking off the embargo was a partial measure; and that it has since been renewed in all the ports of France.

The world is not so blind as not to see—nor so unjust as not to acknowledge—the striking contrast between the conduct of the United States, towards France, and her conduct towards the United States. They allow, that on the part of France, it has been one continued tissue of insolence, outrage, dissimulation and cant;—while they bear witness to the modest, honourable, open and ingenuous deportment of our country.

A correspondent says, that Gen. Defourneaux, who is appointed to succeed Victor Hugues, at Guadaloupe, is greatly attached to the citizens of the United States. After the destruction of the Cape, he resided some years at Philadelphia New-York and Boston, and married his lady here. If, adds our correspondent, the Upas air of Paris has not infected him, we may expect some amelioration of Guadaloupe enormities during his administration. ☞ Very well, Mr Correspondent, but it must be recollected, that he has been chosen by the French Directory.

Lately erected at Dedham, was, on Monday evening last, prostrated with the dirt; and yesterday, one Fairbanks, a deluded ringleader, charged with being an accessary in erecting this rallying point of insurrection and civil war, was apprehended by the Marshal of the district, accompanied by several good citizens of a neighbouring town, and brought to this town, for examination—part of which he underwent before Judge Lowell, last evening.

AUGUSTA, October 25.

To the People of Georgia.

AT a time when every nerve ought to be exerted to preserve and perpetuate your liberty and independence, a few observations on the subject may afford you some information, and be of some use at this critical period.

These observations will apply equally to those whom you may elect to represent you in congress, as those to represent you in the general assembly. A uniform advocate for Frenchmen and French measures must be a traitor to the Union, and ought to be as much avoided as the lava of a burning mountain. One of your representatives in congress having declined being a candidate, charity induces us to let him retire in peace. But the other (Mr. Baldwin) being a candidate, and using every low cunning and open effort to be re elected, his conduct ought to be analyzed, and his public conduct examined.

If the length of time which he has been in Congress as your representative, would make good his title, he certainly stands foremost on the list; for, in February last, he was thirteen years a Member of Congress, from Georgia, and in that period he has received for his services from this state and the United States, upward of forty thousand dollars, and his expenditures are extravagantly rated at two dollars a day, making in thirteen years 9490 dollars; so that he made a clear profit, by being a Member of Congress, the enormous sum of THIRTY THOUSAND DOLLARS. A modest republican would of himself retire from an office which he held thirteen, indeed nearly fourteen years, by which he pocketed thirty thousand dollars; but Mr. Baldwin is a French republican he will not part with power if he can help it; and like his old friend Talleyrand, he wants a little more money.

Let us now turn our eyes to Mr. Baldwin's conduct in Congress. He voted against raising (in case of need) 80,000 of the militia—he voted against arming our merchant vessels—he voted against providing a navy—he voted against fortifying our ports and harbours—he voted for renewing negociations that their depredations on our commerce might continue. In short, he has on every occasion voted in favor of France, and against our own government.

The man who can thus sacrifice the government, the constitution, the laws and the honor of his native country, at the shrine of French despotism, must be influenced by motives not of the purest dye: But above all to support and countenance the scoffers of our holy religion, ought to make us pause, and enquire if he is not among those who believe there is no GOD.

A CHRISTIAN.

NORFOLK, November 6.

Saturday arrived here seven Masters of American vessels, viz. Ed Jones, of the ship Mary of Charleston (S. C.) Charles Bridgham, of the ship Suffolk, of Alexandria; Christopher Frank, of the brig Lucy, of Boston; Thomas Shaw, of the brig Fusileer Portsmouth (N. H.) Edward Watts, of the brig Maria, of do. Robert Strong, of the schooner Charlotte, of Portland; H. Brookings, of the sloop Friendship, of Boston, from Point Petre, Guadaloupe (by way of St. Thomas's) where they were carried in, their vessels condemned without the form of a trial, or any kind of hearing, and put on board a prison ship, and there confined until the 4th ult when they were liberated on their parole of honor not to take up arms against the French republic, until regularly exchanged as prisoners of war. Privateers are daily fitting out and sailing, who capture and bring in all vessels without discrimination. Their treatment on board was an allowance of 4oz. salt fish (sometimes changed for 3 oz. beef) 1lb. bread, and plenty of water.

The privateersmen did not forget to rob them of all their wearing apparel, &c. &c.

Left there a number of other masters of vessels, among whom are Capt. Knox, of the brig Jane, of Philadelphia; Capt. Clark of the brig Iris, of New-Haven; Captain Treadwell, of the schooner Olive, of Boston; Capt. Raynes, of the schooner Clarissa, and Capt. Moulton, of the brig Serapis, of Old York; Captains Bartlett and Hutchings, of Newbury Port; Capt. ——, of the schr. Nancy, of New York, and several others, names unknown—all liberated on the same terms.

As they passed Basseterre, were informed that twelve Americans were in jail there, being the masters and crews of two Newbury Port vessels lately carried in.

The above mentioned masters desire thus publicly to return their thanks to Captain Joshua Prebble, of the schooner John, of Fredericksburg, for his polite treatment while on their passage from St. Thomas's, where he was so obliging as to offer them a passage to America.

PHILADELPHIA,

WEDNESDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 14

The whole of the present confusion and trouble of Europe is a barbarous attack on the grand cement of civil society; the grand principle that unites men in a social state, and carries them forward in a general course of co-operation for mutual conveniency and comfort. It is property, the meum and tuum, that is the most general motive of human actions: It is the security of this that is the great end and bond of society. The coalitates of Europe, all civilized nations, had long gone hand in hand together, in the common paths of peaceful commerce: Even in times of war, the dominion of morality was acknowledged—the rights of nations respected. But the French nation, led on by the madness of enthusiasm, and disclaiming all regard to laws human and divine, openly professes by physical force, to pursue the great end of physical enjoyment.—The rulers of France, with arms in their hands, propose to make all other nations hewers of wood and drawers of water, and that they themselves, like the ancient Romans, shall live like sovereign princes. As the price of peace to peaceful nations, they demand contributions for their own private state, as well as for the public revenue. In a word, other nations are to be slaves: the French, under the affected name of citizens, are to be the only gentlemen!—Phil. Gaz.

A fellow who has for many years hawked mint water, and other distillations about the streets, in a wheel-barrow, and who has attracted considerable attention by the dull monotony and nasal twang of his cries, has actually amassed a considerable property, by retailing out his liquors in small drams, so as to be enabled to carry on his vocation by proxy. A striking evidence, that diligence and perseverance, even tho' in the lowest calling, may, in course of time, ensure the happiest success.

Mr. HARPER.

I am happy to inform my readers, that Robert Goodloe Harper, Esq. is elected by the vast majority of 1005 votes. This shews that the people of South Carolina have a just sense of the honour reflected on them by the splendid talents and unshaken integrity of their Representative. How great do these electors appear, when compared to the constituents of a LYON or a LEIB!

The influence of Mr. Harper is not confined within the walls of congress, nor within the boundaries of this extensive country. His celebrated pamphlet on the "Dispute with France" has spread all over Europe, except in the free republic of France. It has, I believe, passed through eleven numerous editions in Great Britain; besides which an abridgement of it has been published at a low price, by which means it has reached every cottage in the kingdom. His Speech, too, on the Intercourse Bill; that speech, in which he so nobly vindicates GENERAL WASHINGTON against the vile aspersions of MUNROE and his crew, and in which he so ably defends the conduct of the administration; that Speech has been published in London, and, though on a subject entirely local, has been read with an avidity seldom equalled.

Thus is this gentleman the defender of the honor of the government and the country, and as such, he is entitled to the gratitude as well as the admiration of his countrymen. Porcupine.

SEE THE LYON!

A curious Hibernian Lyon to be seen at Vergennes in Vermont.

[Price two Mills.]

This animal is said to be the most curious and extraordinary Beast ever seen in this country. Though this is confidently asserted to be the real Lyon, yet it is so far from belonging to the noble African race, that it resembles them in nothing but the name. He is said to roar much louder than the Lion which was exhibited up and down Connecticut river the year before last; but in addition to his roaring talents, he is said to have the faculty of Spitting, from which circumstance naturalists aver, that he must be of the mongrel breed, partaking in a very considerable degree of the Tiger or Cat kind.

This is supposed to be the same creature that exposed himself to view the last winter at Philadelphia, like a Monkey in all shapes to the infinite diversion of the public; where he was taken the same instant, for an Owl by his stupidity, for a Lamb by his patience, for a Cow by his courage, for an Ass by his braying, for a Cur by his barking, for a Puppy by his whining, for a Hog by his eating, for a Cat by his spitting, and for a Lion, by nothing but his being the greatest of all beasts.—He is a frightful looking animal, yet has never been found to be dangerous—for in all pugnacular contests, which are his delight, he is generally quite tame, unless armed with a wooden sword; being the same that was flog'd at Windsor, and can'd at Congress without any signs of resentment. He has, however, of late grown so restive and troublesome, that his owners have thought fit to Cage him, where he may at any time be seen, by the curious in Beasts, who all agree in his being the most extraordinary one ever exhibited.

"Walk up, gentlemen, and see the Lion."

[Han. pap.]

The grateful Return.

A subscription has been opened at Savannah, in Georgia, for the relief of the Suffering Poor in Philadelphia: The Editor of the Georgia Gazette remarks—"It is pleasing to be informed, that some thousands of dollars, which remained undivided among the sufferers by the fire here in 1796, will be most chearfully relinquished in favor of the Philadelphians, accompanied with a desire to the Corporation to transmit the same immediately."

COMMUNICATION.

In the military parade of this forenoon every thing would have been highly pleasing and interesting, but for one reflection which irresistibly stole upon the minds of the spectators, viz. that a large majority of the characters who were presenting their respects to the ILLUSTRIOUS CHIEF, differed widely from him in political sentiments; especially as to the occasion of this warlike preparation! This idea struck a damp upon the satisfaction which otherwise would have been excited by the survey of such a scene of mingled patriotism and gratitude. Let the officers of the Philadelphia brigade of militia, who are conspicuous for personal bravery and skill, reflect upon this lamentable truth; and while admiring the virtues and dignity of their LEADER, operate on their minds a coincidence of sentiment and conduct. Then will these public displays be accompanied with public admiration and applause.

Unexampled Liberality, by the Society of Friends at New-Lebanon, (commonly called Shakers.)

On the 8th inst. came to the City of Albany, consigned to the Committee, Twenty Seven Waggons, loaded with Good Provisions, consisting of flour, meal, beef, pease, &c. put up in the best order, a Voluntary Donation, from the Society of Friends, at New-Lebanon, for the relief of their afflicted Fellow-Citizens in the City of New-York The provisions were immediately shipped on board Captain Houston's vessel which sailed for New-York—In recording this instance of pure genuine benevolence and charity, we feel most strongly impressed (as must every mind) with sentiments highly favorable to the moral principles of the Friends' Society.—What a dignity and lustre is here added to their uniform and acknowledged character for benevolence and charity! MADE their eſcape from the Gaol in the borough of Lancaſter, on Saturday evening laſt, between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock, two French priſoners, part of the crew of La Croyable.

Had on when he went away, a white hat, pantaloons, and ſhort jacket, tight made, and probably took with him ſome other clothes.

The other named Peter Dupricux, a native of Bujoin in France, 20 years of age, about 5 feet 8 inches high, grey eyes, dark complexion, a ſeaman by occupation, a dirty ill-looking fellow. Had on when he went away, a blue ſailor's jacket, with large tow trowſers, an old wool hat, ſpeaks imperfect German.

Alſo, made his eſcape the ſame day, about nine o'clock in the morning, from the ſame gaol, a negro man named Peter Huſton, about 5 feet 4 inches high, of a ſmiling countenance, lately convicted of a felony in this county. Forty Dollars Reward

FOR APPREHENDING
A GENTLEMAN NEGRO,

BY name GEORGE or GEORGE PARKER, the property of the ſubſcriber, who has thought proper on the night of the 21ſt inſt. to elope from his maſter without any provocation or juſt cauſe; he was formerly the property of Beckwith Butler, eſq. and lived a conſiderable time with ——— Pottenger, who kept tavern in Frederickburg, having ſeen much company and travelled with ſeveral gentlemen through different parts of this ſtate, he is much known. It is therefore conjectured he will puſh for ſome of the northern cities or towns as he has diſcovered an averſion to plantation work, though he may perhaps have croſſed the ridge where he has a brother belonging to major Butler.

This fellow is about five feet ſeven inches high, well proportioned and walks active and briſk, his countenance is open and agreeable enough when in good humour; he can hardly be ſurpaſt in ſhrewdneſs, and is a very capable waiting-man, houſe ſervant, barber, &c. To deſcribe his dreſs would be uſeleſs, as he poſſeſſed a variety of clothes, though when dreſſed lately, he wore a green coat bound with white ferreting and ſpotted jacket and breeches. Whoever brings him home or ſecures in goal in this or any other ſtate the ſaid ſlave, ſo that I may get him again, ſhall have the above reward. ALEXANDER VASS.
